Thank you for kindly responding. The problem is that other areas have enacted such fees, which is clearly the wrong path, to penalize people with rightful fears of grave health concerns, probable many fatal, if the true bombardment to the home of these radioactive signals is almost constant, not as the misleading, original, false reports by the power companies, of a "couple times" daily. The truth is that the power companies have no idea of the deadly risk, but thousands of people, reliable people, have complained already of serious maladies. I am a realtor affiliated with no groups or parties on this matter, but have experienced shocking and bizarre headaches during the time we had it on our house. This danger is the real McCoy! And of course the power companies, as far as I know, have not reduced the rate charges to people who have this meter .

APS and the other companies who are financially seeking to penalize those who do not want their 'smart meters' in their homes are acting like thugs and bullies. Michael Goguen from APS actually referred to people who write of their trepidations and real health concerns from these smart meters as that they "seem to spin up others". He even singled out Prescott as an area of intense resistance to these meters. This is APS's method of "punishing" the people who would like themselves and their families to live a life without the infliction of grave, debilitating, and fatal ailments that many others, and, if they were honest, even APS's "shills", have good reason to believe are too real.

APS and the other power companies moved ahead recklessly and relentlessly on procuring these probable "Deathrays" and now want to "strongarm" them down everyone's throat. I know firsthand that these are dangerous and potentially deadly because of shocking and frightening headaches I incurred shortly after this meter was installed and the relief that did not come until days after it was replaced with the analog meter. Previously, my entire life was spent never prone to headaches. I think the potential exists for brain and other cancers as well as other serious maladies. I think that APS and the other power companies already know this but also know it will be generations down the road when studies can retroactively report what many informed people already know. That will be too late for most. I believe that the public must make it loud and clear that any commissioners who vote for such ludicrous penalty charges should be voted out of office when their time comes and any new candidates should be firmly against such terrible policies. APS's approach is akin to the brutal actions of countries who lock up or kill dissidents, only APS is using the most cunning method they can to break the wills of concerned consumers, especially when they know how painful and unaffordable these extra costs would be at this time for so many. These actions by these power companies in essence are a potential death sentence for so many, but especially the children. This matter needs to be fought legally and through public and media attention because it is a barbaric abuse of power and arrogance showing true contempt for decent people. In reality, the penalty charge is the power company's attempted extortion of innocent people, who have good reason to believe the radioactive signals these meters put throughout the home far outweigh the known dangers of cellphone use, which are believed to have instigated the common epidemics of once-rare brain cancers and other cancers in humans. It is akin to APS demanding fearful consumers to pay what amounts to a health/life insurance premium on top of their bill to protect their family's very lives, which in essence is a "punitive tax". Let the Commissioners tell APS to come back in 20 years or so when truly independent and objective studies have a true reading on the effects of these meters. In the meantime, APS should be told, "no go" on the fee charge and people should not be penalized and face financial hardship because they care for their families health and welfare.
